Prepositioning of Cal OES and Local Government Resources for Red Flag Warning Event

In preparation for dangerous fire weather conditions, including high winds, anticipated to impact Northern California Counties, the Governor's Office of Emergency Services (Cal OES) has strategically pre-positioned critical fire response resources to include strike teams of fire engines, firefighters, water tenders and emergency dispatchers in the designated impacted areas. These resources and personnel began staffing up into position last night, 10/13/14, and continue to do so today. The pre-positioned fire resources and emergency personnel include:

- Sonoma County Operational Area – one Type-3 engine strike team, one water tender, one emergency dispatcher
- Marin County Operational Area – one task force of Type-3 fire engines and one water tender, one additional water tender, one emergency dispatcher
- Solano County Operational Area – one Type-3 engine strike team
- Alameda County Operational Area – one Type-3 engine strike team, one water tender, one emergency dispatcher
- Contra Costa Operational Area – one task force of Type-3 fire engines and one water tender, one emergency dispatcher
- Napa County Operational Area – one Type-3 engine strike team, one emergency dispatcher
- Santa Clara County Operational Area – one Type-3 engine strike team
- Lake County Operational Area – one task force of Type-3 engines, a water tender and a leader, one additional water tender

All pre-positioned resources are expected to remain in place until fire weather conditions improve in the region. Additional resources could be staffed up as well, depending on the weather conditions across the state.

Weather of Concern

Northern California

Fire Weather

- Strong winds and low humidity are expected through Monday night across portions of Northern California creating critical fire weather conditions, increasing fire weather danger.
  - Potential for rapid fire growth
  - Potential for downed trees and powerlines

Freezing Temperatures

- Portions of far-north and eastern California are forecast to experience the first freeze of the season, tonight into Monday morning. Valley lows are expected to range from 20 degrees to 30 degrees, with a few locations in the teens Monday morning. Mountain valleys will dip well into the teens.

Southern California

The first strong Santa Ana event of the season is forecast to begin late tonight into Monday morning. Gusts could reach 75 mph in the Santa Monica Mountains and portions of the L.A./Ventura Mountains Monday morning. While gusts 35 to 55 mph are expected to occur across wind prone coast and valleys. Winds should diminish some Monday afternoon; however, remain moderately strong through Tuesday. Winds should remain blowing offshore through much of the week, strongest in the morning hours, but much weaker Wednesday-Saturday.

- Critical fire weather conditions are forecast tonight through Tuesday for portions of southwestern California.
  - Peak wind gusts tonight through Monday
    - Coasts and Valleys: 35-55 mph
    - Mountains: 45-75 mph
  - Minimum Humidities: 5-15%
  - Potential for rapid fire growth and extreme fire behavior
  - Potential for downed trees and powerlines

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

- High risk for fire activity due to gusty north-northeast/offshore winds and low relative humidity (RH) through Monday for the west slopes of the Cascade-Sierra Range, Sacramento Valley and foothills, mid coast-Mendocino and northwest mountains.
- High risk for fire activity due to gusty northeast/offshore winds and low relative humidity through Monday for the North Coast, Bay Marine and Diablo-Santa Cruz Mountains.
- Gusty north-northeast/offshore winds will continue and last through Monday. Strongest night/morning gusts 40-50 mph across the west slopes of the Cascade-Sierra Range, Diablo-Santa Cruz Mountains and higher ridges found within the Coast Range between Del Norte and Napa counties. Gusts 25-35 mph Sacramento Valley, North Coast and Bay Marine. Strongest wind gusts are expected through Sunday night.
- Less wind Tuesday through Thursday, although continued north-northeast-east directions with some overnight gustier breezes within the Sacramento Valley and west slopes of the Cascade-Sierra Range.
- Dry to very dry airmass will continue well into next week. This includes single digit and teen daytime readings and poor to very poor recovery during the overnights.
- Daytime temperatures will generally range between 5-15 degrees above normal next 7-10 days.
- Precipitation is not likely for the next 7-10 days.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Another low pressure system will form over Arizona Monday as a trough dropping down the Great Basin cuts off from the main flow. This low will sit and spin over Arizona through the end of next week. Strong high pressure over the Pacific Ocean will approach the West Coast Monday and Tuesday and then it will weaken Wednesday through the end of next week.

- Maximum temperatures will be near to a little below normal today, with mid 50s to mid 60s across the mountains and 70s to low 80s in the valleys.
- Northeast winds of 20 to 40 mph with gusts to 60 mph will surface across the mountains and below the canyons and passes of Southern California tonight through Tuesday morning.
- Winds will decrease and become less widespread Tuesday afternoon through Wednesday morning and then become light by Wednesday afternoon.
- Minimum humidity will drop into the single digits and teens Monday and Tuesday and then increase to 10% to 25% Wednesday through the end of next week.
- Temperatures will warm to around 5 degrees above normal next week, with 60s to low 70s across the mountains and upper 70s and 80s in the valleys.
